PRESIDENT'S POINTED ANSWER.

His Boys Not Eligible to Go to School for Rich Men's Sons.

Washington, March 12—Senator Beverlidge introduced David K. Goss to President Roosevelt to-day. Professor Goss formerly lived in Indiana, but he is now the head of a school for the sons of rich Americans in Strasberg, Germany. He came to the United States to invite President Roosevelt to send one of his sons to the Germany school, and the introduction by Mr. Beverlidge gave him the opportunity.

The President said his boys were not eligible, as their father was not rich.

The Speaker answered that the chair had sent the bili to the Committee on Live Stock and Dairies, where he deemed that it properly belonged. After some parliamentary debate on the point, the journal was approved as Judge Sherman then moved that the bill sent to the Agricultural Committee by the House, saying that he had drafted the bill, and that it had no connection with live stock or dairying. The vote proved very close. At the end of the first roll call Sher-man was two votes to the good. Meanwhile the administration men became exceedingly active. Lindly Shanahan and Chiperfield rushed wildly about endeavoring to enlist the nonvoling members in Miller's behalf.

Several changes were recorded, several of them after yisits to the Speaker's chair, during which whispered colloquies took place. The members took advantage of the situation to secure promises of the Speaker's indulgence or influence in relation to matters in which they are interested.

Luke (Dem.) of Waghington County, was among those of the Southern Illinois men who sought the Speaker's ear, and then suddenly requested to be recorded as voting in support of the administration. He wished to obtain the floor when the convict-labor bill comes up, as he is interested in defeating the ninety-day clause, which is attached to it.

Chester Penitentiary is in his district. The interests at Chester and in the district wish a longer time than ninety days in which to do away with the existing system of employing the convicts. Augustus W. Nohe's "regulator," prohibiting telegraph companies from using their wires to send messages to poolrooms and care and diligence, and now has quietly pushed it to the verge of passage.

Murray of Sangamon, when it came up
this morning as a special order on second reading, moved that it be referred to the Judiciary Committee, as it involved legal points which on their face indicated that it is unconstitutional. This aroused Nohe's ire.

"Mr. Speaker." said he, "I am not much of a lawyer; but when it comes to the constitutionality of bills I am an expert. I have been in the bill business a long time."

Nohe and Representative Alien maintained that the measure conduces to the good morals of society; that the sending of reports to poolrooms and bucket shops is the rulnation of hundreds of men. Murray's motion was defeated, as was also a subsequent motion to strike out the enacting class of the measure. Accordingly it was sent to engrossment for advancement. and Charter Reported Favorably.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

Springfield, Ill., March 12—A great Chicago resolution was reported favorably from the Senate Committee on Judiciary this morning. It provides that at the next general election a constitutional amendment shall be submitted which would empower the Legislature to vest Chicago with a scheme and charter and to consolidate the powers that are now divided among the various governmental departments in the city. The resolution was introduced and made a special order for next Wednesday.

Senator Parker introduced a bill which aims at reforming the system of keeping the public accounts. It provides for the creation of a State Board of Public Accounts, to consist of an expert accountant, the State Auditor, and the president of the Board of Charities. The bill requires this board to inaugurate a system of accounting for all departments of State. It also embodies a provision for quarterly consolidated pay roll for all departments, to be printed regule by for the information of the public.

The following bills were read a third time and passed;

Providing that the defendant only may make application for a change of venue in a justice court.

Providing that if the jury disagrees the Justice may set the trial at any time, not more than ten days thereafter.

Providing, that if the person making the complaint before a Justice falls to prosecute, the Justice may, in his discretion, enter judgment for costs against the complainant.

Providing, that every execution issued up-

BIBLE HAS NO PLACE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

That the Bible should not have a place in the public schoolroom is the opinion of the Reverend Dector Emil G. Hirsch of Chicago, who last night delivered an interesting lecture on the subject before an audience which crowded the Central High School auditorium, on Grand avenue.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the St. Louis Society of Pedagogy.

"With us, state and religion are divocted," said Doctor Hirsch, "and it would be a fatal day for this Republic on which these two were reunited in unnatural wedlock.

these two were reunited in unnatural wedlock.

"The argument that the introduction of the Bible is not in contravention of this fundamental pinciple of our Constitution is not difficult of refutation," the speaker declared. "The Bible is so closely interwoven with religion that the minds of many who have honestly come to cherish convictions that are opposed to the fundamental tenets of religionists will take alarm when their children are expected to read chapters
from the Bible."

The fact that these antireligionists are taxpayers, Doctor Hirsch said, gives them rights that cannot be ignored, and it would be a queer comment on the spirit of those that plead for the recognition of moral principles as vital to education if their means should lead to the infraction of the rights of others. Such action would be a violation of the Golden Rule.

Moreover, he declared, even the religioniets themselves are not agreed as to what parts of the biblical collection are included in the canon. The Jews hold but one part thereof to be canonical, while the versions differ that have the sanction of the Protestant or Catholic communities. It is a question whether all chapters shall be excluded which are not in the Jewish Bible, and if so, what version shall be used, the Vulgate or the King James.

CRITICISE PHRASEOLOGY.

CRITICISE PHRASEOLOGY. It had been suggested to have the Bible read in the schools without comment, he said, but it was impossible to see what good could come of the mere reading of the Bible. The educational value of such reading, in his opinion, is below par. Besides, the Bible is an Oriental book; its phraseology is strange to children, often incomprehensiis strange to children, often incomprehensible.

"The literature of which the Bible is the extract was that of a people not merely distant from us by dint of the interval of time between our day and theirs, but also on account of the different temper of their thought and mind."

Ethical instruction, he said, must be along fuller lines than those opened by the mere reading and memorizing of Bible texts. Without the Bible the public school may be made a powerful agent of moral culture. Every branch of instruction, whatever lis nearer purpose may be, may be turned into opportunity for the inculcation of vital ethical principles; the discipline and amenities of the schoolroom itself, the example of the teacher, the relations of the pupils to one another; in fact, every incident of school life may be put into service to develop strong and harmonious characters, he declared.

History, the school reader, the discussion of the lives of great men, the sweet notes of, the poets, pictures on the walls and other expedients, said Doctor Hirsch, are ready to hand to bring to flower and fruitage the seeds of moral beauty in the child's bear expedients, said Doctor Hirsen, are ready to hand to bring to flower and fruitage the seeds of moral beauty in the child's heart and soul. These will be effective where the perfunctory reading of the Bible, much mis-understood, must fail, he concluded.

DISPUTE OVER TRADE MARKS.

Assistant Prosecutor to Decide Between Horseshoer and Association.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Dalton yesterday morning left his office and went down to the street to examine the foot of a horse to see with his own eyes evidence which a complainant claimed to have against a man who had infringed on the trade mark of the National Horse Shoer's Association.

Attorney Harry Walsh, representing the National Horse Shoer's Association, complained to Mr. Dalton that the trade mark of the association was being infringed upon by a local horse shoer. He stated that the association's trade mark is an N and an A on either side of a horseshoe. He declared that a local shoer places an M and a W on either side of a horseshoe, which is stamped on the shoe.

He stated that this similarity of trademarks was misleading to horse owners and worked to the disadvantage of the national association. Mr. Dalton took the application under advisement after seeing the alleged infringement on the shoe of a horse brought to the Four Courts.
